For supervisors

Your student is writing a research proposal and chapters in Mrinal's Research Methodology Studio (for English Literature and Mass Communication). The studio does not write for the student; it guides the proposal steps, citations, university format and checks. This page explains how you can read the student's work and give comments.

Reading a review file

1. The student taps Supervisor → Save review file and sends you an .html file by WhatsApp or email.
2. Open the file in any browser, on a phone or a computer. You need no studio, no key and no internet.
3. Write your name. Write a comment under any section (or leave it blank), and an overall comment at the end.
4. Your comments are kept in that browser while you work. Tap Save comments file and send the file to the student, or tap Copy comments and paste them into WhatsApp or an email.

When the student brings the comments into the studio, each one appears under its section or chapter; the student writes a response and marks it resolved. In the next review file the studio can compare versions to show what has changed.

What the student does in the studio

- Proposal: problem, questions, objectives and methods step by step, matched in an alignment matrix.
- Chapters: each chapter is linked to the objectives it answers.
- Citations and bibliography: in the chosen style (APA, MLA, Chicago or Harvard).
- Before submitting: a declaration on the use of AI tools, saying what AI was used for, or that none was used.

Approving the proposal

When you approve the proposal, ask the student to mark it as approved in the studio. The proposal then becomes read only; if the student changes it, the studio shows the difference from the approved version.

A supervisor's key

If you would like to use the studio yourself, or to show it to students, you can take a supervisor's key.

> The student's work stays on the student's device. A review file holds only what the student chooses to send.
